

Dear Families,

Thank you so much for another great month at school! It is near the end of our first ten weeks and already our students are making great gains. We are looking forward to meeting with you on November 20th and 21st for Parent-Teacher Conferences and discussing your child(ren)'s achievement thus far. Our teachers have collected valuable data on your child's progress and are excited to share these specifics with you. Teachers plan to hand-out first quarter report cards, go over some sample work, and share testing results with parents. It's also important to use this time to share your impressions of the school year, and to ask any questions you might have. Here are just some questions that might help you gain meaningful information at your conferences:

- At what level is my child currently reading? What type of growth have you seen so far this year?
- Can you describe my child's reading? Is it fluent and expressive? Does my child read at an appropriate pace?
- At home my child enjoys reading _____ . Can you make any other recommendations for reading material?
- At home we try to talk about what our child has read. What other things can we do at home to help with comprehension?
- Does my child seem to know his/her math facts?
- The homework you assign typically takes about ____ minutes to complete. What strategies can you recommend to make homework as effective as it can be?
- What sort of things can we do at home to keep our child motivated about his/her schoolwork?

If you run out of time at your conference and still have unanswered questions, feel free to follow up with a written note, or schedule a second meeting with the teacher. Consider developing a solid relationship and strong communication with your child's teacher as your homework for the year!

With Sincere Regards,
Brooke Reid
